The Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office will be featured in an upcoming episode of the Discovery Channel's new series, 120 Hours Behind Bars, which offers viewers an inside look at jail operations and the dedicated professionals who work behind the scenes to maintain safety and security.

The episode highlighting the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office is scheduled to air on the Discovery Channel on February 9. 120 Hours Behind Bars is a documentary-style series that provides an in-depth, unfiltered look at life inside detention facilities across the country. The show focuses on the challenges faced by correctional deputies, staff, and administrators, while also exploring the realities of incarceration from multiple perspectives.

"This series provides a transparent look at the work our correctional deputies and staff do every day," said Sheriff Henry Whitehorn Sr. "We are proud of the professionalism, commitment, and resilience demonstrated by our team, and we appreciate the opportunity to share that with a national audience."

The episode about the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office showcases the daily operations at the Caddo Correctional Center, highlighting the complex responsibilities of maintaining order, ensuring inmate welfare, and supporting public safety.

Viewers are encouraged to tune in to the Discovery Channel on February 9 to watch the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office episode of 120 Hours Behind Bars. For more information about the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office, visit Caddosheriff.org or follow us on social media.
