The Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office will be featured in the upcoming seventh season of JAIL, a reality television series produced by Langley Productions, the creators of COPS. The new season premieres Saturday, October 3, and will be available on Roku, Prime Video, Sony PlayStation, and VIZIO.

JAIL takes viewers beyond the arrest and into detention facilities across the country, documenting the work of corrections officers and deputies as they manage the unpredictable circumstances that arise during the booking and detention process.

Season 7 offers an inside look at the Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office and the dedicated men and women who maintain safety, security, and order within the parish correctional system. The series captures a range of situations, from challenging and sometimes chaotic encounters to emotional and humorous moments, giving viewers a firsthand look at an often unseen side of law enforcement.

Produced by Langley Productions, JAIL is a companion series to the long-running television program COPS. The series expands the production company's access-driven storytelling by following what occurs after a person is taken into custody.

The seventh season will launch simultaneously on several major streaming platforms, significantly broadening the series' potential audience. It will be available through FAST (Free Ad-Supported Streaming Television) services, which allow viewers to watch programming without a subscription fee in exchange for advertisements.

The Caddo Parish Sheriff's Office's appearance on JAIL gives viewers across the country a chance to see the daily responsibilities and challenges deputies and corrections personnel face within the parish's correctional system.

About JAIL:

JAIL is produced by Langley Productions and follows corrections officers and deputies inside detention facilities across the United States. The series documents the booking and detention process, as well as the interactions between law enforcement personnel and individuals following their arrests.
