Woman uses credit card stolen from case worker

Tuesday, January 25, 2011
A woman was arrested for stealing credit cards from her child support case worker and using them to purchase baby supplies and other items.

Christina Alvord was visiting the District Attorney's Child Support Offices in November when her case worker left the office to retrieve a file. When the case worker returned, she noticed her wallet containing several credit cards was missing.A short while after leaving the office, Alvord went to a local discount store and used one of the cards to purchase $455 in merchandise.

Alvord, 22, of Shreveport, was arrested by Caddo Sheriff's Detective Doug Smith and booked into Caddo Correctional Center for forgery.
